

Designing and Implementing Teacher Evaluation Systems

To keep the conversation going, the Texas and Southeast Comprehensive Centers at SEDL have invited Dr. Ulcca Joshi Hansen from the Colorado Department of Education (CDE) and the Colorado Legacy Foundation to present an in-depth discussion of Colorado's teacher evaluation system. Colorado's proposed evaluation system has garnered national attention as a promising model for identifying highly effective teachers. This follow-up webinar to the above regional institute will focus on the nuts and bolts and the practical steps for implementing or enhancing the teacher evaluation system in your state.

Target Audience

Educators involved in the teacher evaluation, quality, and/or effectiveness initiatives in their state, including decision makers in the state departments of education, education intermediary agencies, higher education institutions, board members, and pertinent consultants.

Outcomes

- Increase understanding of Colorado's experiences in developing, implementing, and refining its teacher evaluation system.
- Discuss Colorado's experiences as they relate to efforts by other states to develop and implement their own teacher evaluation systems.

Description

- 1) Development of a coherent framework for teacher evaluation that includes both professional practice and student growth measures;
- 2) The challenges of identifying and selecting student growth measures for use in teacher evaluations for all teachers, including those in non-tested subjects and grades;
- 3) The aggregation of multiple measures in order to make determinations about teacher effectiveness;
- 4) Communications strategies for various stakeholders;
- 5) Take-aways—do's and don'ts, issues and challenges, and ways to overcome obstacles.

This webinar is sponsored by the Texas and Southeast Comprehensive Centers at SEDL in collaboration with the Colorado Department of Education and the Colorado Legacy Foundation.
